Dear Brentwoodians,

We have the winner of the Brentwood logo contest featured on our cover this month!

From Cam Howey of Brentwood Cares:

“From 15 logos entered in the Brentwood Logo contest, the “I heart Brentwood Logo” was selected number one. It was created by active Brentwood community member and chalk artist extraordinaire Melanie Swailes. Thanks to all those who submitted designs and helped us select Brentwood’s favourite. You’ll see it on t-shirts, carry bags, stickers, and other items being released to mark Neighbour Day on June 17 (details to come).”

From Melanie Swailes:

“As a member of the Brentwood Community Association Board, my focus is primarily on development issues within our community. Development involves building or changing, but sometimes what matters most is what doesn’t get developed or built – Nose Hill Park is the best example!

In 1979, concerned NW residents staged a march on Nose Hill because they wanted to save it from development and preserve it for future generations. I don’t know the “marchers” from that day, but every time I walk or run on Nose Hill, I am grateful for their foresight. Imagine how different Nose Hill would look if it were covered with houses and roads all down the slopes! Instead, Brentwood and other nearby communities have this incredible natural asset right on our doorstep.

That’s what I tried to capture in my simple watercolour sketch. At first, I couldn’t figure out how to illustrate a hill and yet tie it into Brentwood, but the pedestrian bridge became the connection, both literally and figuratively. Hopefully, everyone recognizes the bridge and the pathways that lead up to fabulous walks, runs, biking, and exploring up on Nose Hill Park!

If you participated in saving Nose Hill back in the 1970s, a huge thank you from today’s Brentwoodians!” (Editors note: We would love to hear about your experience and memories of that crucial moment of activism – please contact the Bugle at the email address below to share!).

Photo Contest

The Bugle is looking for Brentwood’s best amateur photographers to provide cover images each month. If you have a great snap of our neighbourhood saved on your phone or posted on your social media feed, send it in for a chance to be featured on the cover of an upcoming issue! Photos must be 300 DPI or higher (i.e., from a newer model phone or good digital camera), 2400 x 1600 pixels minimum size, and portrait orientation. If submitting pictures of minors, please make sure that you have direct, express permission to submit the picture from a parent or guardian. Send your photos, or any questions, to bcabugle@telus.net.

Yours sincerely,

Jonathan Jucker, editor

PREY

July 21 marks one year since the release of the action sci-fi film, Prey. Filmed in Alberta and set in Comanche Nation in the 1700s, it's a prequel to the Predator franchise. During production, the film was called "Skull" to keep it a secret. The lead, Amber Midthunder, didn't even know she was auditioning for a Predator movie!

Where Will Everyone Live?

by Melanie Swailes

Last month's column focused on some of the factors behind recent increases in the costs of housing, as well as the decreases in availability of affordable housing, whether privately-owned or rented. Housing affordability has become a very real problem and as a city, determining how to increase investment in housing (private or public) is a somewhat controversial topic. What role should the City play in creating or supporting more affordable housing options, for example by converting existing office towers into housing? Should existing properties be subdivided into multiple dwelling units? Does this truly create "affordable" housing?

From a Planning perspective, it might seem that the easiest way to have more options for housing, especially more affordable options, is simply to build a lot more. If there is a glut of housing, prices should come down, right? Except it doesn't seem to be working that way. Many of the newer townhouses and multi-unit buildings are replacing existing old homes: the old ones were cheaper to rent, while the new homes sell or rent for much higher amounts. Newer doesn't necessarily mean affordable. Plus, with increasing numbers of new residents coming to Calgary, the number of new builds does not outpace the growth.

Herein lies the challenge: According to Stats Canada data, Calgary's population increased by 42,225 between 2021 and 2022. From the 2021 census, the average household size in Calgary was 2.6 persons. In theory, in order to accommodate the increase in population, 16,240 dwelling units are required just to accommodate the growth for that single year.

Since the current residential vacancy rate in Calgary is low (about 2.7% in January 2023), there are not enough existing "empty" dwellings available to fill the demand. Even if "empty", not all dwellings are available for long-term (one year or more) leases or rentals. In Calgary, Short Term Rentals (STRs) require a Business License Number, and the registry shows that there are 4,769 units available for short term rentals (e.g., platforms such as Airbnb and others). <https://data.calgary.ca/Business-and-Economic-Activity/Short-term-rentals-data-lens/wawk-kcjq>.

STRs may be an attractive option for the owner of a property, although they take away from the long-term rental options in the area. For example, in Canmore, there are large numbers of rooms or dwellings for rent on a daily to weekly basis, but far fewer places that can be rented by someone intending to live in the community for a longer period of time. This affects housing affordability because if a dwelling is rented out short-term, it increases the competition for existing long-term dwellings because there are fewer of them available.

STRs aside, with tens of thousands of new residents moving to Calgary, we still need to be building more. Where? There are two options: greenfield areas (i.e., previously undeveloped new communities) or existing brownfield areas within the existing city limits (such as Westbrook LRT area or the former Midfield Trailer Park).

Calgary's Municipal Development Plan (MDP) determined in 2009 (and updated in 2020) that it needs to increase growth in established areas, with two goals:

- 33% growth in established areas by 2039; and
- Ultimately achieving a balance of 50% new residential units in new areas and 50% in greenfield sites within the next 60 to 70 years.

Even the lowest goal has 33% of all new development slated for existing established communities. If we take 33% of the 16,240 figure, that would be 5,359 new dwellings required in existing communities. Keep in mind, it's not a one-time goal, but it would happen yearly, depending on the population increase. Also, secondary suites do not count as an increase in density as far as City data goes.

In Brentwood, we have two obvious areas for increases in density: Northland Mall (with current construction of residential units already well underway) and the Brentwood LRT Station area (where the Brio building is the newest addition). Not all communities have such space within their boundaries.

In 2009, when the Brentwood Station Area Redevelopment Plan (ARP) was finalized, it referenced "Areas of Stability" and "Areas of Change", meaning that the greatest change would happen around the LRT area, not everywhere within the community. Since then, instead of creating individual ARPs for each community,

July Updates

We had a busy end of the year with Scouts camping at Chain Lakes and Cubs doing a backpack fishing camp, while Beavers did a sleepover at the Hangar Airplane Museum and made and flew kites in Nosehill Park. All the sections had canoe lessons at Lake Bonavista or Glenmore reservoir.

We have lots of exciting events planned for the fall; we have a group adventure camp planned, orienteering, Kub Kars, Animal Game, and more Beaver sleepovers! You'll see us at the Triwood Market on September 5 and 26, as well as at the Triwood Community Cleanup on September 17. We will have our special brand 4th Elks Coffee on sale.

Happy Scouting!

the City has moved to an LAP (Local Area Plan) model in which six to ten communities are grouped together.

Instead of placing the greatest density within a defined area (such as around the LRT), in communities with an LAP already in place, there are more likely to be other housing forms such as townhouses, four-plexes, and so on interspersed within all areas of the community. Part of the reason is a preference of owners or tenants who want direct access to some private outdoor space which a townhouse can provide (instead of an apartment). But much of it is also due to the investment involved. A tower-type project requires high amounts of capital investment upfront, has a long lead-time, and requires companies that can commit the time, dollars, and expertise to such a project. In contrast, there are more small developers or investors who are capable of financing or building a small project with a much shorter time frame.

As a result, throughout the city, you can see many examples of properties where nothing seems to happen for a long time even though there is land available on which to build (Westbrook LRT is a prime example). Yet within the communities nearby, there have been many redevelopments (such as the many townhouses or multi-units along 19 Street NW), even though there may be opposition and negative impacts on neighbouring properties.

There are no easy answers. When the city grows by tens of thousands of people in a single year, changes are inevitable. As the population of the city increases, more homes are needed, and the challenge for communities such as Brentwood is how to adapt while still retaining many of the features that we love best.

In Memory of Ted Kornak

by Lee Hunt

"Dad was always committed to his wife and family," said Patrick Kornak, while his sister, Anita, added, "Dad was a generous man who always wanted to help others." As you can imagine, both are very saddened by the March 8 death of their father, Ted Kornak.

Ted and his wife, Myrna, moved to Brentwood almost 60 years ago. It was here that they raised their five children – Patrick, Mark, Anita, Greg, and Margot.

Ted taught for the Calgary Catholic School Board for many years as an Industrial Arts teacher and as a principal. Ted's former Grade 8 student, Rob, reminisced, "I have particularly fond memories of the boys' volleyball team piling into Mr. Kornak's car to go and win the City championship. Then back to his house for a rowdy pizza party celebration."

When Ted inherited a printing press, he set up a small business in his garage in the late 70s. Eventually he renamed the business "Brentwood Printing", but initially it was called "After 5 Printing", apparently so called because it came after his daytime teaching job. But according to Patrick – commenting on his dad's great sense of humour – "Dad also joked that the original company name came about because raising five kids required a second income."

At Brentwood Printing, Ted printed bus pass cards, notepads, plus the weekly bulletin for Brentwood's St. Luke's Church.

Ted and Myrna were founding members of St. Luke's. The congregation started out in Brebeuf School before the actual St. Luke's building was erected. Ted was active on many committees at St. Luke's as well as a long-time member of the Knights of Columbus at the church.

Ted had a real passion for golf. In fact, in his early years, he debated whether to become a teacher or a professional golfer. Though he opted for teaching (primarily because his father convinced him there was more money to be made in teaching rather than in golfing), in retirement Ted became the assistant golf pro at Pinebrook Golf Course.

Family was so important to Ted. Vacations often found Ted, Myrna, and the five children camping and visiting relatives in Saskatchewan. Back at home, Myrna volunteered at Brentwood Community bingos, while the kids participated in neighbourhood flag football, hockey, Brownies, dance, and roller skating.

Myrna and Ted greatly enjoyed being members of the Dots and Dashers Square Dance Club for many years. A special highlight was dancing at the Opening Ceremony for the Calgary 1988 Winter Olympics. Another square dancer, Jackie, recalls Ted as "a very good dancer, always willing to help... who made others feel welcome."

Summing up his parents' love for their children, in-laws, and grandchildren, Patrick told me, "They've always been there for us."

We at The Bugle extend our condolences to Myrna and family in the loss of Ted. May you have many fond memories of a caring, hardworking man with a lively sense of humour.

We Remember Doreen Currie

by Lee Hunt

We at The Bugle extend our condolences to the family of Doreen Currie who passed away on May 4, 2023.

Doreen and her husband, Don, lived in Brentwood for many years where they raised their daughter Leeanne.

Many former customers will recall Doreen as a professional hairstylist at Serena's Beauty Salon (now Iconic Salon) on Northmount Drive.

Doreen will be fondly remembered by Leeanne, grandsons Ian and Daniel, plus extended family.
