New and Enhanced Recycling Across Alberta

by Anne Burke

The Province has fully transitioned its residential recycling program for packaging and paper products to an extended producer responsibility (EPR) framework. The new recycling program is 100% funded by producers who now cover about $110 million in annual costs previously funded by municipalities and taxpayers.

You can recycle the same items no matter where you are in the province, while eligible communities and registered multi-family residences will receive enhanced recycling services. You are able to place paper, plastics, glass, and metal products together for recycling. Only the packaging belongs in your blue cart – not the product itself. Recycle new items such as foam packaging, flexible plastic packaging, aerosol containers, laminated paper and plastic packaging, deodorant sticks, toothpaste tubes, and glass containers. Foam from packaging blocks, egg cartons, meat trays, and takeout containers are allowed, as well as flexible bags and wrappers like snack bags, food wrappers, packaging wrappers, and pouches. You may also recycle aerosols from hairspray, dry shampoo, shaving foam, sunscreen, cooking spray, and whipped cream.

Circular Materials, a national not-for-profit organization, is responsible on behalf of producers for collecting, processing, and returning more materials to producers for making new products and packaging. The rollout has occurred in two phases. Phase One was launched April 1, 2025, welcoming 200+ communities into the EPR system. Phase Two was launched October 1, 2026, adding communities that previously had depot-only service or no collection at all.

New sorting technology will identify and separate more types of recyclables with better accuracy. "Preconditioning" recycling facilities prepare mixed materials for efficient processing. GFL Environmental in Rocky View County for Calgary and Hauler WM (formerly Waste Management) are industry partners for Edmonton. The Circular Materials Alberta Municipal Working Group provides a forum for municipal representatives to share feedback, raise questions, and directly connect with Circular Materials team members.

Community Update for Residential Fences Backing onto Country Hills Boulevard

Keith Tomchuk would like to thank all Hawkwood residents who connected with him to sign the application to the City of Calgary for an updated noise level study to determine whether that road warrants the installation of noise barrier fencing. Keith has advised that the required number of signatures for the application have been collected and the City has verified the submission. A noise assessment will be conducted in the spring of 2027, and the results of the assessment will drive next steps. An update on the results will be published in the newsletter when they are known. Stay tuned!

News from the Friends of Nose Hill

by Anne Burke

The Glenbow Archives entry for Robert Aramant refers to the researcher and author who spent time in Calgary, during the early 1980s. He is primarily recognized in local archives for his field research and documentation on Nose Hill. For in library use only, Calgary Public Library has a copy of his report: "The Tipi Rings Nose Hill: Calgary April 1982 to May 1983."

Robert Bo Ararmant (1932-2022) in the Natural Areas Group of the Calgary Field Naturalists' Society surveyed stone circles along the southern margin of Nose Hill uplands. Studies were done during the months when ground conditions were suitable. His research detailed bearing and distance information between tipi rings and on the diameter and number of stones with each ring. He recorded 60 new rings as well as mapping previously identified sites. Vehicle tracks, rubbing stones, and an unknown group of poplars were indicated.

Other maps show roads, critical bearings to Nose Hill Tower and horse barn. Following his study, the site was revisited. New rings related to recorded sites were compared. Some rings matched the original Lifeways of Canada definition by Alberta's first and longest-operating heritage and historical resources consulting company. Robert wrote it is very important to point out that this report only surveyed a small part of the proposed Nose Hill Park area. Even the southeast part of Nose Hill, where the report presents newly found tipi rings, has been very incompletely surveyed.

Consequently, there are many more tipi rings on natural prairie grassland areas and probably also many other kinds of archaeological sites and artifacts as well that are undiscovered on Nose Hill. It is very desirable that the natural prairie grassland still left on Nose Hill be preserved and protected. Read more at: www.newcomerkentuckiana.com/obituaries/robert-aramant.

Living Alongside Urban Coyotes

by Calgary Wildlife

Spotting a coyote in Calgary isn't unusual. You might see them crossing a quiet residential road at dawn or dusk, moving through an urban park, or down a river path. While seeing one can be surprising, coyotes are naturally cautious animals that generally prefer to avoid people.

Coyotes are highly adaptable, which is one reason they thrive in and around cities. Calgary's network of parks, natural areas, river valleys, and green spaces provides ideal habitat and travel corridors, while urban environments can offer shelter and food. Their natural diet consists primarily of small mammals such as mice, voles, rabbits, and ground squirrels, along with insects, berries, and other seasonal foods. By helping control rodent populations, coyotes play an important role in maintaining healthy urban ecosystems.

Although coyotes are present year-round, their behaviour changes throughout the seasons. In late winter, particularly January and February, breeding season can make adults more territorial. During spring and early summer, parents become especially protective as they raise pups. By autumn, young coyotes begin dispersing from their family groups in search of new territories, increasing the chances of sightings throughout Calgary as they travel unfamiliar routes.

When pups are present, coyotes may also show "escorting" behaviour, following a person or dog from a distance as they move away from the den or territory. Although this can feel intimidating, escorting is generally a defensive behaviour rather than an aggressive one. The coyote is responding to a perceived threat and encouraging it to leave the area.

Most encounters between people and coyotes are brief and uneventful. Coyotes typically keep their distance, but problems can arise when they begin associating people with food. Intentional feeding, unsecured garbage, fallen fruit from backyard trees, compost, or pet food left outdoors can attract coyotes into neighbourhoods. Once animals become food-conditioned, they may lose some of their natural wariness, increasing the likelihood of conflict.

Simple actions can help reduce attractants around homes and communities. Make sure to securely store garbage in bins until collection day, clean up any fallen birdseed and pick up any fallen fruit. Compost bins should be properly maintained, pet waste should be regularly picked up, and pet food should not be left outside. These measures help discourage coyotes and many other wildlife species from relying on human-provided food sources.

Responsible pet ownership also plays an important role in preventing conflicts. Cats are safest indoors, particularly between dusk and dawn when coyotes are often most active. Dogs should remain on a leash in parks and natural areas unless they are in designated off-leash spaces where wildlife activity is low. Keeping pets close reduces the chance of defensive interactions, particularly during denning season.

If you encounter a coyote, remain calm and give the animal plenty of space. Do not approach it or attempt to feed it. If a coyote does not give you space or appears aggressive, make yourself appear larger by standing tall, maintain eye contact, pick up small children or small dogs, wave your arms, and speak in a firm voice while slowly backing away. Running is not recommended, as it may encourage the animal to give chase.

Coyotes have adapted remarkably well to urban life, but successful coexistence depends on maintaining healthy boundaries. By keeping wildlife wild, removing food attractants, and respecting their space, Calgarians can help reduce conflicts while supporting one of Southern Alberta's most adaptable native species.

Remembering and Reconnecting

by Rebecca Pink

November gives us a moment to pause and honour, with deep gratitude, those who served and sacrificed for others, and those who continue to serve today. It is also a reminder that remembering is something we all carry in different ways. Remembrance is not limited to one day or one kind of loss, it can take many shapes, often quietly woven into our everyday lives. Sometimes remembering brings comfort; other times, it brings sadness, longing, or emotions we weren't expecting. There is no right way to remember or feel. We can continue to try to make room for whatever comes, with a little gentleness and self-compassion,

Grief is something that many people carry quietly. I know this from my own experience as well. It can be complicated, heavy, and unpredictable, bringing waves of emotions that can shift from one day to the next. We don't always talk about it, and sometimes we may feel as though we are expected to "move on" or "be fine". However, grief doesn't follow a timeline and is never linear. We can make room for both the sadness of what is no longer here and the gratitude for once was.

November can be a challenging month for many of us. The days grow shorter, the temperatures drop, and for many of us, our energy shifts with the season. Rather than seeing this as something we need to push through, maybe it can be an invitation to slow down and check in with ourselves. What might you need a little more of right now? Rest? Connection? Time for yourself and your loved ones?

November gives us an opportunity to pause, remember, and reconnect. We might reach out to someone we haven't spoken to in a while, revisit a memory, or make a little more room for the people and experiences that matter to us. For those carrying grief, these moments of connection can be especially meaningful. Sometimes remembering together is a way of reminding ourselves that we don't have to carry it alone.

As we move through November, I also want to take a moment to remember and honour those who have served and continue to serve, and the families who stand alongside them.

Lest We Forget.
