Tool Shed for All Seasons

We hope this season you will take full advantage of the tools available in the Community Tool Shed. We are continuously trying to expand the tool inventory based on the demands from the community. Check our "Tool Shed" page on ournewbrighton.ca and click on the inventory link to see the wide array of tools you can use free of charge.

We have a lot of new neighbours in the community and some of them may need tools for different projects. If your new neighbour asks you about the best places to buy tools or wants to borrow something from you, you can tell them we have a Tool Shed they can use free of charge. The Tool Shed can give you peace of mind until you find the best deal—just borrow the lawnmower from the Tool Shed anytime you want to cut your grass. There are tools for all seasons and all kind of projects.

Thanks everyone for taking pride in your house and your lawn appearance, and for making our community brighter.

A Flower to Remember

Red poppy seeds can remain dormant in the soil for years. During the First World War, artillery and trench warfare disturbed the earth along the Western Front, allowing poppies to bloom across the landscape. The sight inspired Canadian Lieutenant-Colonel John McCrae's 1915 poem "In Flanders Fields", helping the red poppy become an enduring symbol of remembrance.

Remembering and Reconnecting

by Rebecca Pink

November gives us a moment to pause and honour, with deep gratitude, those who served and sacrificed for others, and those who continue to serve today. It is also a reminder that remembering is something we all carry in different ways. Remembrance is not limited to one day or one kind of loss, it can take many shapes, often quietly woven into our everyday lives. Sometimes remembering brings comfort; other times, it brings sadness, longing, or emotions we weren't expecting. There is no right way to remember or feel. We can continue to try to make room for whatever comes, with a little gentleness and self-compassion,

Grief is something that many people carry quietly. I know this from my own experience as well. It can be complicated, heavy, and unpredictable, bringing waves of emotions that can shift from one day to the next. We don't always talk about it, and sometimes we may feel as though we are expected to "move on" or "be fine". However, grief doesn't follow a timeline and is never linear. We can make room for both the sadness of what is no longer here and the gratitude for once was.

November can be a challenging month for many of us. The days grow shorter, the temperatures drop, and for many of us, our energy shifts with the season. Rather than seeing this as something we need to push through, maybe it can be an invitation to slow down and check in with ourselves. What might you need a little more of right now? Rest? Connection? Time for yourself and your loved ones?

November gives us an opportunity to pause, remember, and reconnect. We might reach out to someone we haven't spoken to in a while, revisit a memory, or make a little more room for the people and experiences that matter to us. For those carrying grief, these moments of connection can be especially meaningful. Sometimes remembering together is a way of reminding ourselves that we don't have to carry it alone.

As we move through November, I also want to take a moment to remember and honour those who have served and continue to serve, and the families who stand alongside them.

Lest We Forget.

New Abilities

by Michelle Macdonald, Letter Writing and Mail Club Enthusiast.

If you could wake up tomorrow with the ability to do something new, what would it be? What if it were a completely far-fetched or magical skill? How would you use it, and where would it take you?

Dear reader,

Considering magically gaining a skill overnight made me think of many potential scenarios. One of the first things that came to me was having unlimited home and car maintenance skills because I would be able to use them frequently to support my family. However, when I thought about it, I realized I would not want to spend my time on those tasks because they are messy, time-consuming, and often done alone.

I would want a skill that is more social and homes in on my interests. So, I thought about what I've been attracted to learning in the past. One skill I've worked on for many years is speaking Spanish. It's been an on-and-off process since my twenties, and I'm still at the intermediate level. This gets me by when I'm traveling, but I've always felt frustrated not being fluent because it holds me back from fully expressing myself or truly understanding the people I meet. Wouldn't it be wonderful to communicate effortlessly in another language and just say what's on your mind?

Since we're considering magically gained abilities, I'd take it a step further than fluency in Spanish; I'd wake up ready to communicate in any language. Imagine the opportunities it would open up! I could use multilingualism to immerse myself entirely in any place and culture.

I absolutely love to travel. I find it's the best way to learn and gain new perspectives. The more different the destination from my home, the more it opens my mind. Being able to speak the local language would vastly improve my understanding of things I'm curious about: history, politics, geography, regional customs, and culture. Reading about these things in books or watching videos online can never match the insights gained by speaking directly with people who have lived the history and experience its culture every day.

My magical language skills could be used for a greater purpose: recording endangered languages before they disappear, deciphering ancient manuscripts or petroglyphs, and even collecting valuable international intelligence. The possibilities feel endless!

Your turn! If you could wake up tomorrow with a new skill, what would it be? Write in your journal or to your pen pal.

Happy writing,

Michelle
